

ABSTRACT

The present invention provides a cage which can be assembled easily and disassembled in a compact manner.

The present invention is a cage, which comprises a cage main body having a side wall and a roof and a mount for supporting the cage main body, being constituted in such that the side wall includes a plurality of nets with a bent or curved portion and a plurality of plates with their right and left end portions connected to the right and left end portions of the nets, and the right and left end portions of the connected nets are substantially flush with the right and left end portions of the plates.